Aliasgar M. Bangcola Jr

Grand Master Professor Aliasgar Macarimbang Bangcola Jr. is a Filipino criminologist, educator, and martial artist from Lanao del Sur, known for shaping criminology education in the Bangsamoro region and for building a martial arts career that put him among the youngest Grand Masters recognized anywhere in the world. He's spent years moving between two worlds that don't usually mix: the classroom, where he trains the next generation of law enforcers, and the dojo, where he's built a combat system entirely his own. Add in his work during the Marawi crisis and his campaigns against predatory lending schemes, and you get a picture of someone whose reach goes well past any single title.

EARLY LIFE AND FAMILY

Bangcola Jr. was born on July 26 sometime in the 1980s, into a family where service runs deep. His father, Ret. Colonel Aliasgar Bangcola (AGS), served in the Philippine Army, and his grandfather, the late Brigadier General Jimmy Mangacop Bangcola (GSC), was a ranking officer in the Armed Forces of the Philippines. His mother is Bae A Labi Cobby Cobrah "Insik" Mulituba Macarimbang. Growing up surrounded by military tradition on one side of the family clearly left a mark, since discipline and public service would go on to define his own path too, even if he ended up channeling it through criminology and martial arts rather than a uniformed military career.

He completed his elementary and high school years across a mix of schools in Rizal, Laguna, and Manila, bouncing between provinces before eventually settling into the field that would define his career. For higher education, he pursued an interdisciplinary track centered

MARTIAL ARTS CAREER AND MAJOR ACHIEVEMENTS

While building his academic credentials, Bangcola Jr. was just as focused on martial arts, and it's here that he picked up some of his most striking distinctions. He holds the rank of 8th Dan Black Belt, 4th Degree, and from 2017 to 2021 he carried the title of Third Youngest Grand Master in the world, a recognition that placed him among a small handful of practitioners globally at that level and age. In September 2021, he added a World Champion title in the Kata Form category to his record.

He's also credited as the first person to bring Stealth Kung Fu to the province of Lanao del Sur, introducing a discipline that hadn't had a foothold there before. Beyond that, he developed his own system entirely, called Fil-Chi, a proprietary martial arts combat style that blends his training and regional context into something distinctly his.

Over the course of his career, he's trained more than 7,000 students, and the range of who he's trained says a lot about his influence. His student roster spans state law enforcement and regional combatants alike, including members of the Philippine National Police (PNP), the Bureau of Jail Management and Penology (BJMP), the Bureau of Fire Protection (BFP), the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA), the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF). Training across that spectrum, from state forces to former and current members of Moro liberation movements, points to a level of trust and access that's genuinely rare for one instructor to hold.

INSTITUTIONAL CONTRIBUTIONS AND EDUCATOR CAREER

Bangcola Jr. is widely credited with helping pioneer professional criminology studies in the Bangsamoro region. As the first Criminology Instructor at Lanao Central College, he brought his hands-on field experience straight into the classroom, and under his guidance the program grew into one of the more respected academic tracks in the area. It's the kind of contribution that doesn't always make headlines, but it shapes a region's institutions for years afterward.

He also holds leadership positions across a number of national and international organizations, including:

- Founder and President, Mindanao Stealth Kung Fu
- Philippine Presidential Coordinator, WUSU Martial Arts
- Philippine National Branch Director, World Federation Fnoon Al-eshtebak
- Board of Director, Golden Eagle IPO Shadow NCR

HUMANITARIAN WORK AND LAW ENFORCEMENT AFFILIATIONS

Bangcola Jr.'s work hasn't stayed confined to academia or competition mats. During the Marawi siege, he mobilized the World Martial Arts Unity organization to carry out humanitarian relief and support missions for those affected by the crisis, putting his organizational reach to use when the region needed it most.

He's also taken on a more investigative role in protecting local communities, leading operations that shut down roughly 37 abusive Online Lending Applications (OLAs), along with illegal recruitment agencies and other establishments exploiting local youth. That kind of work sits at the intersection of his criminology background and his hands-on instinct for community protection.

As a specialist in Criminal Behavior Analysis, his profile has reportedly drawn membership invitations and collaborative interest from a number of major global security agencies, including INTERPOL, the CCIO, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). He's also said to currently hold a Confidential Status within two separate government agencies, alongside affiliations with multiple international organizations, though the specific nature of these roles isn't publicly detailed.

LEGACY AND CULTURAL SIGNIFICANCE

What stands out most about Bangcola Jr.'s career is how naturally he's bridged academic criminology, physical self-defense, and grounded, real-world community justice. By bringing structured martial arts training to both state law enforcement units and local regional groups across Mindanao, his work has contributed meaningfully to discipline, cross-community engagement, and the broader professionalization of public safety education in the region. For a province like Lanao del Sur, where access to specialized training and academic infrastructure hasn't always come easily, his presence as both educator and martial artist carries weight that goes beyond personal achievement.
