Early Life and Educational Foundation

Dr. Domado's relationship with Mindanao State University began early and remained unbroken throughout his life. A four-time MSU alumnus, he built his academic credentials across multiple disciplines and institutions. He earned his Juris Doctor degree from the University of the East in Manila in 1983, demonstrating his commitment to legal scholarship. Recognizing the intersection between Islamic law and modern governance, he completed specialized Sharia training in 1991, deepening his expertise in Islamic jurisprudence. This multidisciplinary foundation positioned him uniquely at the crossroads of law, Islamic studies, and statistical analysis.

Historic Achievement: Pioneer PhD Graduate

In 1993, Domado achieved a milestone that would forever mark his place in MSU's institutional history. He became the first and only individual to earn a PhD from Mindanao State University, a watershed moment for the university's academic credibility and research standing. This accomplishment was not merely personal achievement; it validated MSU's capacity to produce doctoral-level research and scholarship. As an accredited statistician who chaired the Graduate School Panel in 1993, Domado helped establish rigorous standards for high-level academic inquiry at the institution.

Professional Career and Administrative Leadership

Domado's professional journey began in 1975 at the Jamiatul Philippines Al-Islamia Foundation (JPI), where he served as a full-time instructor before rising to pioneering professor status in the Graduate School. His career spanned over four decades, the vast majority dedicated to MSU's advancement.

By the early 2000s, Domado had ascended to increasingly significant administrative roles. His crowning institutional responsibility came as Director of the Board of Regents (BOR), Supply, Property, and Auxiliary Services, where he oversaw critical operational, procurement, and resource management functions for the entire university system. He carried this responsibility until his retirement in 2019, ensuring that MSU's physical infrastructure, supply chains, and auxiliary services operated with integrity and efficiency.

International Experience and Global Perspective

Beyond the Philippines, Domado's professional footprint extended to the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, where he served as an Administrative Officer at the Revenue Attaché Office. He also worked as a General Consultant for Yellow Pages in Riyadh, managing a diverse team of 24 managers and bringing Filipino professional standards to an international marketplace. This international experience enriched his understanding of organizational dynamics and cross-cultural management.

Leadership Philosophy: The Alpha Phi Omega Legacy

Domado's approach to leadership was fundamentally shaped by his early involvement in collegiate civic organizations. As a pioneering member of Alpha Phi Omega (Beta Upsilon Chapter, MSU), he internalized the fraternity's cardinal principles of leadership, friendship, and service. These weren't mere organizational slogans; they became the ethical framework guiding his four-decade career.

Leadership through stewardship manifested across multiple roles. Beyond his MSU directorship, he served as:

- Grand Chancellor of the JPI Mother Chapter of Mindanao (1975–1977)
- President of the MSU ILS Federated Organization
- President of the JPI Faculty Association
- Vice President of the RIR Forum

Each role prepared him for progressively greater institutional responsibility.

Character and the Common Touch

The principle of friendship took on distinctive meaning in Domado's life. Colleagues and students consistently remarked on his humility and "common touch," a rare ability to treat security guards, drivers, and high-ranking government officials with equal sincerity and respect. He demonstrated that authentic leadership isn't measured by hierarchy but by genuine human connection. This egalitarian spirit made him beloved across the university community, earning affection from those at every organizational level.

Mentorship and Pedagogical Legacy

Service became Domado's lifelong vocation, expressed through both administrative stewardship and passionate teaching. As a pioneering professor in the Graduate School, he inspired generations of students through mentorship grounded in intellectual rigor and moral guidance. His students valued not just his expertise but his willingness to invest in their professional and personal growth. This mentorship legacy extended beyond the classroom; former students often credited Domado's encouragement as pivotal to their career trajectories.

Family and Personal Values

The cornerstone of Domado's life was family. Alongside his wife, Bae Alabi sa Ramain Ombae Sarip Domado, he prioritized the education and success of their ten children. The couple instilled values of discipline, sacrifice, and perseverance that yielded remarkable results. Their children pursued diverse professional paths, achieving success across multiple fields:

- Two earned doctoral degrees
- Four became engineers
- One became a nurse
- Two entered management professions
- One pursued advanced studies in biology

Domado viewed his role as a father and husband as his most profound service, understanding that family excellence reflects larger institutional commitment.

Spiritual Foundation

Throughout his life, Domado attributed his many successes to the grace of Allah, reflecting a faith-centered worldview. His identity as a Muslim intellectual contributed meaningfully to MSU's mission as the nation's premier Muslim university and research institution. He modeled how Islamic values of discipline, integrity, and service-to-community could animate academic and administrative work.

Legacy and Recognition

Dr. Domado's retirement in 2019 marked the conclusion of institutional service but not the end of his influence. His legacy persists through:

- The first and only MSU PhD graduate, establishing a precedent for institutional research excellence
- Generations of mentored students and professionals scattered across Philippine and international institutions
- A family of accomplished professionals whose success exemplifies his personal values
- A standard of humble, servant-centered leadership that contrasts sharply with ego-driven administration

His life demonstrated that great institutional achievement needn't rely on self-promotion or hierarchical distance from those being served. Instead, it emerges from sustained commitment, intellectual rigor, ethical consistency, and genuine care for others' development.
