Early Life and Education

Ma-amor built a strong academic foundation across two very different but complementary fields: law and public administration. He earned his Juris Doctor (Bachelor of Laws) from the University of the Visayas in Cebu City in [YEAR], graduating as a Leadership Awardee. He later pursued his Doctor in Public Administration (DPA) at Mindanao State University's Main Campus in Marawi City in [YEAR], where he was recognized once again for leadership, this time also earning the distinction of College Awardee. Ma-amor's public service roots trace back to his time as Chief of the Administration and Finance Division at the Department of Agrarian Reform in Lanao del Sur, based in Marawi City, starting in [YEAR]. It was here that he first showed his knack for building systems from scratch. He developed the office's very first employee manual, laying out proper business procedures and office guidelines where none had existed before. He also led the launch of "DARAYO," the Provincial Office's first ever quarterly newsletter, giving the office a consistent voice for sharing updates internally and with the public. On top of these, he spearheaded major office improvements as division chief, work that reflected his broader instinct for organizing people and processes toward clearer, more efficient outcomes. His reliability on the job was such that he was frequently tapped as Officer-in-Charge whenever the head of the Provincial Agrarian Reform Office II stepped out on official business, a role that speaks to the trust placed in him by his superiors.

Mindanao State University System

Ma-amor now holds one of the more demanding posts in Philippine higher education administration as Vice Chancellor and Acting Vice President for Planning and Development of the MSU System. In this capacity, he spearheaded the formulation of the MSU System Strategic Plan, led the drafting of the MSU System 10-Point Agenda, and finalized the MSU Land Use Development and Infrastructure Program (LUDIP), three major undertakings that continue to guide the university's direction going forward.

He also chaired the institutionalization of PRIME-HRM (Program to Institutionalize Meritocracy and Excellence in Human Resource Management) within the university system. His committee work runs deep: he served as Overall Chairperson of the Planning and Development Committee, Chairperson of the Organizational Structure and Staffing Pattern Committee, and Chairperson of the Income-Generating Projects Committee. He additionally took on the role of Vice-Chairperson for the Infrastructure Design, OSR Green, Smart, and Resilient Committee, the Policy on Governance Committee, and the Comprehensive Anti-Smoking and Tobacco Control Policy and Guidelines Committee, a wide-ranging portfolio that touches nearly every corner of university governance.

Academic Career

Alongside his administrative duties, Ma-amor continues to teach as Associate Professor V at the College of Public Administration, Graduate Studies, MSU Main Campus. He handles graduate-level instruction in Public Ethics and Accountability, where he pushes students to think critically about ethical governance and the responsibilities that come with public office. He also teaches Introduction to Planning and Local Government, walking students through the foundational concepts of governance, public administration, and local development. Beyond his home campus, he has served as a lecturer for numerous local and international trainings and seminars, extending his influence well past MSU's classrooms.

Ma-amor holds several professional eligibilities recognized under Philippine civil service standards, including the CSC Police Officer Eligibility, the Career Service Professional Eligibility, and the PD 907 Honor Graduate Eligibility.

Colleagues and students alike describe Ma-amor as organized, resourceful, analytical, collaborative, and results-oriented, traits that show clearly in the range of committees and projects he has led. He is proficient in the Microsoft Office suite (Excel, Word, and PowerPoint), tools he relies on heavily in both his administrative and teaching work. His professional interests center on strategic planning, local governance, academic and policy research, and educational leadership, threads that run consistently through both halves of his career.
