Law Enforcement Career

Radiaganding dedicated decades of public service to the Philippine National Police (PNP), rising through the officer ranks to attain the star-rank of Police Brigadier General (formerly designated as Police Chief Superintendent).

His operational tenure was largely concentrated within the conflict-vulnerable areas of Mindanao. Throughout his service, he managed complex security dynamics including counter-terrorism efforts, local insurgencies, communal clan feuds (locally known as rido), and community-oriented policing. Within the force, he became a strong proponent of using traditional cultural mechanisms to de-escalate local tensions before they manifested into armed conflicts.

Political Career

Following his retirement from active police service, Radiaganding transitioned into formal democratic governance to continue his public service career:

- Provincial Legislator: He successfully contested a seat in the Sangguniang Panlalawigan of Lanao del Sur, serving as a Provincial Board Member representing his district.

Region

Lanao del Sur, Bangsamoro Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (BARMM)

- Policy and Civic Oversight: During his legislative tenure, he collaborated extensively with municipal executives throughout the province—including leadership in the Islamic Municipality of Tamparan—to advance local programs focused on public education, social welfare, and rural developmental frameworks.

Traditional and Cultural Leadership

Parallel to his modern administrative titles, Radiaganding holds a revered, hereditary seat within the Pat a Pangampong ko Ranao (The Four Principalities of Lanao), which dictates the traditional socio-political organization of the Maranao people.

As the enthroned Sultan sa Lumbatan, he functions as a formal custodian of Maranao ancestral customs (Adat) and Islamic jurisprudence. He frequently represents the Federation of the Royal Sultanates of Lanao del Sur in high-level civic functions, multi-agency assemblies, and traditional cultural events.

Conflict Resolution and Peace Advocacy

Due to his dual background as both a top-tier former police commander and an active traditional royal leader, Radiaganding is regularly sought after as an arbiter for local and regional stability:

- Electoral Integrity: During volatile local election cycles, he frequently partners with the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP), the PNP, and grassroots networks like the Kazalimbago Movement to lead political candidates in signing multi-party peace covenants.
- Inter-faith Dialogue: He represents traditional Islamic leadership in collaborative dialogues with Christian prelates and non-governmental organizations to foster peaceful, multi-cultural coexistence in the province.

Personal Life

Radiaganding belongs to a prominent Maranao family native to the Lanao region. As a member of the royal lineages of the Pangampong, his upbringing was deeply grounded in both Islamic principles and traditional Maranao nobility. He maintains a close-knit family life, balancing regional leadership commitments with his roles as a father and community elder. He is highly regarded in local civic circles as a mentor to younger Maranao public servants entering law enforcement and local government units.
